Soraya Sarah Nazarian

Soraya Sarah Nazarian is an Iranian-born artist. She is a master in direct stone carving. Her work explores themes of motherhood, family, spirituality and Iranian culture. Soraya immigrated to the U.S. in 1979 with her family. In the 1980s, Soraya began sculpting at American Jewish University, and established her own studio soon after. Her work is distinguished by two major periods: the 1980s-1990s were a time of discovery and experimentation while the 2000s are marked by the creation of large-scale sculptures.

Several of Soraya's large-scale public art sculptures have been commissioned by cultural, educational, and medical institutions in Israel and the U.S. Recent commissions include Identity (2010) at Saperstein Middle School in Los Angeles, CA and Wings (2014) at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem in Jerusalem, Israel. Two large commissions are planned in 2017, one at California State University, Northridge and the other at Rambam Hospital in Haifa, Israel. Soraya lives and maintains a studio in Los Angeles, California.
